Dear Harold: Many thanks for the book, still unread I'm afraid but it tops the pile. I have been extra busy lately and the greatest problem is to keep up with reading. But I don't begin to compete with you in hours of work - can't do what I once did although I feel very well.

I'm intrigued to know that you were once doing a job on Dies, and sad that no one to whom you have loaned the material returns it. I won't be able to give much space to Dies, nevertheless if you have any brief items about him that are not generally known, I would of course welcome them. But I will not take your time from much more vital matters.

I would still like to know - if you ever do have time - quite briefly what your experience with the inquisition has been. Your name did not come up to the best of my recollection during the time I was editing the Guardian.

I don't understand at all about your relations with Arnoni. Of course A is a nut but in my relations with him (I never met him) he has seemed very, sometimes painfully honest. But being where I am this is nothing I can do anything about.

Un abrazo
